

Chasing 'Benefits'

Issues on Access to Genetic Resources and Traditional Knowledge with reference to India's Biodiversity Regime

A post-Nagoya Protocol view on Access and Benefit Sharing

Kanchi Kohli and Shalini Bhutani

This briefing paper has been prepared for the NGO Alliance on CBD (India) and has been supported through WWF-India's CSO initiative.

There is no copyright on this publication.

You are free to copy, share, translate and distribute this material. One only asks that the source be acknowledged and that a copy/link of your reprint, report or translation be sent to: kalpavriksh.delhi@gmail.com

The research and writing of this paper has been done jointly by Kanchi Kohli and Shalini Bhutani. Kanchi is member Kalpavriksh Environment Action Group. kanchikohli@gmail.com
Shalini is an independent lawyer and biodiversity researcher. emailsbhutani@gmail.com
Together with other groups in India they coordinate the Campaign for Conservation and Community Control over Biodiversity.

Address for correspondence:

No. 7 Top Floor, Sector 15A
NOIDA - 201301, (Uttar Pradesh)
Tel: (+91) 120 4229767
E-mail: kalpavriksh.delhi@gmail.com
List serve: BioDWatch@yahoogroups.com

Apt.5, Shree Dutta Krupa
908, Deccan Gymkhana
Pune - 411004, (Maharashtra)
Tel: (+91) 20 25654239
E-mail: kalpavriksh@vsnl.net

www.kalpavriksh.org

Designed & Printed at:

Systems Vision, A-199, Okhla Industrial Area Phase-I, New Delhi-110020

CONTENTS

Foreword	5
1. Understanding Access	6
a) Genetic resources	7
b) Traditional knowledge	7
2. India's 'Regulated' Access	8
3. 'Benefits' Revisited	12
4. The Protocol	14
5. Cutting the Chase	17
References	18
Further Reading	18
Relevant Web Links	18
Annexures	19
I India's Draft ABS Guidelines, 2010	19
II Members of NBA's 2 Expert Committees	25
III Annex of the Nagoya Protocol, 2010	27